Robert Bolchoz has practiced law for over 30 years, enjoying stints in public service, private practice, and corporate America. He has represented presidential candidates, statewide elected officials, major corporations, corporate executives, public agencies, political parties, and individuals.

His unique blend of experience provides him with keen insight into the problems, obstacles, and challenges faced by institutions, businesses, and individuals in today's world.

After graduating from The Citadel and the University of South Carolina School of Law, Robert spent eight years in public service, as a Special Assistant United States Attorney, Deputy District Attorney, and as the Chief Deputy Attorney General for the State of South Carolina on two separate occasions.

During ten years with an international financial services company, Robert managed government affairs operations in 12 states, obtained Series 7 and 63 Securities Licenses, and managed the company's relationships with its largest institutional customers across the country as the director of a business unit.

He departed Corporate America in late 2009 in order to launch his campaign for Attorney General in the South Carolina Republican Primary, a race in which he garnered over 90,000 votes.

Robert opened his law practice in Columbia, South Carolina in 2010 and currently practices throughout the State. In the Fall of 2021, he was nominated to serve as the Chairman of the Board of the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control Board by Governor Henry McMaster. In February of 2022 the nomination was confirmed by unanimous vote of the South Carolina Senate.

Robert is a recipient of the Order of the Palmetto, South Carolina's highest civilian honor. He and his wife Cheryl live in Columbia and are the parents of two sons and two daughters.
